The child wandered from the house to the railroad nearby, and was seen on the track by the engineer of an approaching train, who endeavored to stop the train in the intervening distance. The little boy was struck by the locomotive and instantly killed.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

The attending physicians declare that she has one chance in twenty to recover. The bullet penetrated the kidney, and came out in the small of the back.

Mrs. Billups was Miss Smith, daughter of Carroll Smith, of Portsmouth, and married Mr. Billups in Philadelphia some years ago. She has one child, a boy about eight years of age. GENERAL BELL SPEAKS AT V. M. I.

Compares the West Point of the South With the West Point of the North.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LEXINGTON, VA., June 26.—The visit of Major-General J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff, United States army, to the commencement exercises of the Virginia Military Institute, was the most pleasant one, and the distinguished visitor was most favorably impressed with the "West Point of the South."

General Bell reached Lexington Wednesday morning from Washington, D. C., accompanied by Captain Davis, his aid. Upon reaching the V. M. I. grounds at 10 o'clock he was received with a major-general's salute, fired by the cadet battery. General Bell then reviewed the battalion of cadets and inspected the cadet barracks. Following this an informal reception was held in the reading-room of the library, at which were present the board of visitors, faculty and visiting alumni of the V. M. I. invited guests and members of the faculty of Washington and Lee University in cap and gown.

In his address before the graduating class General Bell mentioned the fact that about 100 years ago his ancestors, both on his paternal and maternal side, came from the Valley of Virginia, and that he had connections living in the three counties of Rockbridge, Augusta and Botetourt, so that to-day he found himself in the centre of the land of his forefathers.

General Bell compared the Virginia Military Institute with the United States Military Academy at West Point, and the Virginia school suffered no loss in the comparison.

He remarked that if the two battalions were maneuvering on the same field at the same time it would be impossible to distinguish between them. The only difference he could see was that the buttons of the West Point are round, while those of the Virginia Military Institute are flat.

The speaker showed quite an accurate knowledge of the Virginia Military Institute in its history and its present position in the United States.

Directing his attention particularly to the splendid body of young men before him, General Bell said there are some essential things to be observed in order to insure success—cheerfulness, gentle speech, kindness of heart and pure religion are factors in the career of every soldier, or as to that matter, in the career of any man, that cannot be overlooked or disregarded.

The speaker was optimistic in his faith, and stated it to be his belief that of all despicable persons he knew of, none more so than the inveterate critic, croaker and fault-finder.

Although General Bell spoke at some length, and after considerable delay, his exercises began, it produced a profound impression, and coming as it did from so high and distinguished a source.

EDUCATORS MEET AT UNIVERSITY.
Association of College and Secondary Schools of Virginia in Session.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., June 26.—A notable event in educational circles in Virginia this week is the called meeting of the new Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of Virginia, which held its first meeting at 10 o'clock this morning in Madison Hall at the University of Virginia.

Dr. H. Gray McAllister, former president of Hampden-Sydney College, made the opening address. Then followed the report of the committee on courses of study for the high schools. This committee originated at a meeting held at the University of Virginia a year ago, with the following membership: Professor Bruce R. Payson, of the University of Virginia, chairman; Hon. J. D. Eskridge, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Professor Harris Hart, State School Examiner; Professor W. M. Thornton, professor of mathematics in the University of Virginia; Professor Carter Walker, principal of Woodberry Forest School, Orange, Va.; Professor A. L. Burger, of the Lynchburg High School; Professor A. G. Williams, of the chair of modern languages in Emory and Henry College; Professor R. H. Shepps, principal of the Big Stone Gap High School, and Professor W. G. Shackelford, principal of the Maywood High School.

The report excited a good deal of interest, and was discussed by a number of speakers connected with Virginia schools of higher education, among the speakers being Professors Thornton and Fitzhugh, of the University of Virginia; Professor E. Sumpter Smith, of the Randolph-Macon Academy, Bedford City, Va.; Dr. James Cannon, Jr., of the Blackstone Female Institute; John H. Borton, of the Buchanan High School, and many others.

The object of the committee's labors is to make the public high schools of Virginia preparatory to the colleges and the universities by arranging courses, which, when successfully completed, will enable the student to take up competently his first year of college. The committee also will consider the status of the curriculum, the report proposes a series of units which will be accepted as representing a preparation sufficient for college entrance. Certificates from high schools doing the work as laid down in this report will probably be accepted in lieu of entrance examinations.

In response to a resolution passed this morning inviting him to do so, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, dean of the University of North Carolina, delivered an address this evening in Cabell Hall on "Southern Literature."

BANKS MUST SELL COGBILL'S PAPER

Federal Court Issues Order for Benefit of Bankrupt's Creditors.

The affairs of B. E. Cogbill, the Southside lumber merchant, who was recently adjudged a bankrupt, were brought to the public notice again yesterday, when orders were entered by Judge Waddill directing a number of banks holding collateral for the debts due them by Cogbill to dispose of the same and place the money received to his credit.

This action was in response to injunction orders issued some time ago by the court requiring certain banks to appear yesterday and show cause why they should not be required to dispose of such of Cogbill's collateral as they might hold.

The court issued orders which were almost identical in the following cases: Bank of Lawrenceville, Commercial Bank (Inc.), Richmond; Planters' Bank of Clarksville, and the Bank of Brunswick. The orders directed that the collateral be converted into cash and placed to Cogbill's credit. If in any case there is a balance it will be turned over to the receiver.

The order in the case of the First State Bank, of Chase City, is as follows:

"It is ordered that said bank be permitted, through C. J. Faulkner, trustee, to enforce by sale the lien of the said first mortgage on certain real estate in the vicinity of Boynton, Va., which is held as security for two notes of B. E. Cogbill, bankrupt, amounting to $25,000 principal money, according to terms of said deed of trust, and said trustee shall make report thereof to this court for its consideration."

The rule against the banking house of Williams & Goode was dismissed, the answer of this company showing that it held none of Cogbill's collateral.

In the case of the Bank of Mecklenburg the order set out that the receivers were authorized to collect and reduce to cash all collateral held by them for the payment of debts due by Cogbill to the Bank of Mecklenburg.

Total indebtedness $204,000. In the answer of the receivers for this bank it was set out that the total indebtedness of Cogbill is $204,000, and that $36,000 of this is indebtedness to the bank.

The bank holds $14,000 security, $16,000 of which is stock in the East Coast Lumber Company.

The answer declares that some of the collateral is not worth anything, and that much of it is in notes upon which the bank will hardly realize as much as 30 per cent.

The face value of the policy is held, the face value of which is $25,000 at maturity. The cash surrender value is $890 less $500 due the company in premiums. There were a great many lawyers in court representing various interests involved.

NORTH CAROLINA BUILDING SOLD

Fair Price Paid by Speculators for Jamestown Exposition Property.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 26.—The purchase money for the North Carolina State building at the Jamestown Exposition was paid over to Governor Glenn to-day, through Commissioner-General Joseph E. Pogue, of the North Carolina Jamestown Commission. Neither the amount or the name of the purchaser was made public. However, the statement is made that the amount realized for the building is considerably more than the cost of the building, and that the cost of the building has been the sales of most of the other State buildings. It is understood that the purchasers are speculators, who hope to "unload" on the government at a profit when it comes to establishing the proposed great national school on the Jamestown site.

Mr. Pogue says there is a stipulation in the sale that the building shall retain its name as "North Carolina Building" in whatever changes may be made.

liquor question is concerned, declared in favor of matters as they now stand, being ready, however, to follow the wishes of the people in what they desire. The campaign has been very hot. At the last minute Mr. Carnack started a story that the liquor men had raised a corruption fund of at least $200,000 with which to beat him and in the interest of his opponent. Governor Patterson declared this statement to be a falsehood.

The nominating convention will have 1,318 delegates, and 560 will be necessary for a choice. Patterson's friends claim that he will have at least 778 votes in the convention, and that the number may reach 900. Carnack claims to be confident of winning. In order to carry out the scheme for a prohibition law, it will be necessary to elect a Legislature favoring the plan. This is not deemed possible at this time.
